

Squatch City Times

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 21ST 2021

Bigfoot Spotted: Bubble Tea in Hand!

Mystery in the Woods: Bigfoot's Bubble Tea Obsession Revealed!

Article by Sandy McTrail

The small town of Squatch City has seen its fair share of excitement, but nothing could prepare residents for what happened this weekend. A local man, Earl “Big Earl” Johnson, claims to have had a close encounter with none other than the legendary Bigfoot while enjoying his Saturday afternoon BBQ.

“It was just me, my grill, and a cold beer when I heard some rustling in the bushes,” said Earl, who has lived in the area for 32 years and considers himself a “Squatch expert.” “At first, I thought it was my neighbor Carl trying to steal my secret rib recipe again. But when I looked up, there he was—Bigfoot himself—staring right at me, big as life and twice as hairy!

According to Earl, Bigfoot seemed less interested in Earl’s famous ribs than in something far more unexpected: bubble tea. “He was holding a cup. I swear it! A big ol’ cup of bubble tea, sipping it like it was a hot day at the county fair,” Earl said, shaking his head in disbelief. “I don’t know where he got it, but I ain’t gonna ask questions when a 9-foot creature is standing in my yard, sipping on tapioca pearls like it’s the most natural thing in the world.”

Image courtesy of Yeti Images

Other locals quickly jumped on the story, claiming they, too, had seen Bigfoot strolling around town. Wendy Mae, owner of the Squatch City Wraps food truck, says she spotted the creature in line for her famous Chicken, Bacon, Ranch wrap. “He waited his turn, real polite-like,” said Wendy. “But then he panicked and ran off when I asked if he wanted extra ranch. I guess Bigfoot’s more of a no-condiments kinda guy.”

Mayor Martha Jenkins held an emergency town meeting to address the sighting, though the atmosphere was more festive than fearful. “Let’s be real—this is the most excitement we’ve had since Earl got his tractor stuck in the mud,” she said, to a chorus of chuckles from the townsfolk. “If Bigfoot wants to visit, he’s more than welcome. Just make sure he knows about our annual Watermelon Drop next weekend”

The sighting has already sparked a wave of entrepreneurial energy in town. The local gift shop is now selling limited-edition “Sasquatch” bubble tea cups, and the Squatch City Diner has introduced a new dish: the “Bigfoot Burger” (served, of course, with extra-large fries).

As for Big Earl, he remains the toast of the town and swears he’s telling the truth. “You don’t gotta believe me, but I know what I saw,” he said. “And if that Bigfoot comes back, I’m gonna see if he’ll swap me a bubble tea for one of my ribs.”

Until then, Squatch City waits, watching the horizon for another glimpse of its newest (and most elusive) visitor.

Sasquatch Caught Using Wi-Fi, Locals Demand Answers

Article by Rusty Folklore

Forget hiding in the woods—our beloved Bigfoot is officially tech-savvy. Local café owner, Cindy Parker, claims the legendary Sasquatch was spotted near her shop, hovering suspiciously close to her free Wi-Fi sign.

“I thought it was a prank at first,” said Cindy. “But then my router started acting up, and when I looked out the window, there he was—9 feet tall, fur everywhere, and holding an iPad!”

READ MORE ON PAGE 2